FOREWORD

Numerous studies, histories, and reviews have been published concerning The University of Michigan and its students. However, the enumeration of one of the main products of the University, its graduates, has been described only on a limited basis. This void in the records prompted this office to plan and begin a summary of degrees conferred by the University.

Soon after the study was planned it soon became apparent many problems were to be encountered. Briefly, some of these problems that were found immediately were:

1. Differences of records between two or more seemingly authoritative sources,
2. Apparent changes in degree title that resulted from a choice of titles, and
3. Early records were found to have many voids and/or discrepancies that could not be readily filled or defined.

In addition, the task was so voluminous and time consuming, it was difficult to keep continuity of personnel.

A review of the tables and material that follows will probably call forth many questions. The reader is referred to sources that are readily available in many University offices. A few of these are: Proceedings of the Board of Regents, The University of Michigan - An Encyclopedic Survey, and President's Reports. Other sources of information may be found by referral to the Bibliography. No one single series of sources is adequate to verify all the findings in this report.

Several of our interpretations of the records and data should be explained. Our definition of a degree in course, includes the degrees awarded after the completion of its requirements, and also the degrees awarded upon examination. Any degree awarded nunc pro tunc appears in the year actually awarded and not as the time stated on the degree. Prior to July 1, 1915 the calendar year was used for the reporting time. After that date, the data conform to the fiscal year, July 1 to June 30.

The data have been summarized only in the large groups which will be of most interest to the general public. The information is presented as to allow further studies to be done from the tabulated data. Additional summaries are possible and desirable but it was felt that this would delay getting the information to interested groups.

It was mentioned earlier that this study was conceived some years ago and consequently numerous people contributed counsel, encouragement and data throughout this period. It would be difficult to name all of the very kind individuals who have helped in some way, but I would like to acknowledge the tremendous help that they have been collectively. To each one who has contributed to this study I want to give a hearty and sincere Thank You.

This office would appreciate any criticism of this report. We have strived to make it accurate and complete. However, if there are additions or corrections to be made please let us know.
