This 1-credit graduate course will join the undergraduate, SW 312 course for a weekend intensive in Detroit. Transportation from Ann Arbor will be provided. You may also coordinate meeting the class in Detroit. The full description for SW 312 is below:

This course will be an immersive experience in Detroit working directly with community organizers.

This course looks at movements, resistance, resilience, and liberation. Community Organizing is growing as an academic field, especially as it relates to urban studies. A growing body of evidence reveals that people of color and low-income persons have borne greater environmental and health risks than society at large in their neighborhood, workplace, and playgrounds. Over the last decade, grassroots activists have attempted to change the way governments implement environmental and health laws. Grassroots environmental organizations have organized, educated, and empowered themselves to improve the way government regulations and environmental policies are administered. There will be an in-person weekend intensive in Detroit working directly with community organizers. Other components of the course will be taught through online and in-person workshops. The weekend intensive will take place May 13th & 14th.
In a class setting, we will connect history, current events, and real-life experiences to local organizing and movement struggles that build power for our communities. These courses will utilize highly interactive popular education methods where participants share political analysis, learn facilitation and organizing skills, and think together about long-term, transformative strategies to build environmental, racial, and economic justice.

It is critical for organizers, activists, scholars, and community members to come together, connect our work with each other, share our experiences and place our local organizing within a larger historical and political context. We can build deep and strong social movements that act strategically and collectively over the long term.

The instructor will send out additional information about the class meetings and location through Canvas. Remote sessions will be held from 9:00-11:45 each day and 1:00-5:00 will be in-person on the farm. The farm is located about 40 minutes from Ann Arbor in Dexter.

Students that receive approval to enroll in this class by the Office of Global Activities, must also enroll in SW 789. These students will receive permission to enroll in both classes during registration.

Students who receive approval to enroll in this class must also enroll in SW 785. Enrollment in this class is a requirement for participating in SW 785. Students accepted into SW 785 will receive permission to enroll in this class during registration. Others may enroll as space allows, but may need to submit a Course Enrollment Petition via the SSW website.
